The nursing program has caught my interest since middle school. However, what made me fall deeper into the field was seeing how much a nurse can create an impact on their patients. My mother was diagnosed with stage 4 breast cancer. Thankfully, she is cancer-free now. During her chemo treatments, her nurses never failed to put a smile on her face or compliment her. I know that is part of their job, but the way my mother's face would brighten up with their words of encouragement would help her keep her mind away from her treatment. Out of the many goals I have to achieve as a nurse, this is one of the main ones. I have to impact patients positively; I want them to feel safe and comfortable around me, and most importantly, I want to treat and help them feel better. At the end of whatever my patient had to go through, I want to create a smile on their faces. Having the opportunity to become a nurse is truly a blessing, and I cannot wait to see what the future holds.
