

Comments : On the day the PMH PT teaching was presented in class, I was surprised to find out that Mya had already started working on the template designs. That same day, we decided to exchange phone numbers and create a group chat. We use the chat to text each other whenever we have questions or ideas, and we divide tasks based on our research. We don't have actual meetings; everything is done through texting. I asked Mya if she preferred that I send her my research or if I should put it into the template myself. She chose to do it herself since it was easier for her, and that worked well for our group. She showed us the final template, and we all agreed on it. Overall, I think Mya did a great job putting everything together.
