

Valerie Olivas

Working in the medical field since my early 20's I was a CNA, Medication aide, and later completed my phlebotomist. I have always been happy in the medical field; until both of my kids were diagnosed with cancer a month apart from each other in 2018 that my husband and I had to quit our jobs and basically live in the hospital for 2 years. During all the trials and tribulations from it all, I can finally say both kids are cancer free and living life, the outcome of these traumatic events inspired me to pursue my nursing degree and in return help others go through their own tribulations. I have been so grateful for all the Doctors, Nurses, and other healthcare workers who were apart in our journey, I wouldn't be so dedicated if it weren't for all that I have been through with them and helping us get through the worst time of our lives. To other people, they might just be nurses, or just doctors but to me they are superheroes!!!