

Nursing is something that has always been a dream of mine. For so many years I have always wanted to help others. I want to succeed in making a difference in people's lives. To know that I can be the support that someone may need in a difficult and vulnerable time is something that I am passionate about. For the last nine years I have worked around high school age students, so this is a shift in career for me. These years have driven me more in a sense that helping others is what I gain gratification in.
