Why Nursing?

Why Nursing? There are plenty of scenarios I could present as to why I have chosen to take up nursing; instead of saying the generic reason “to make a difference” I will give my most recent encounter and motivation of why I know that this is the profession I want to walk into. First and foremost, I enjoy learning new things and conquering difficult tasks, nursing can be such an evolving career that it is nearly impossible to get bored of it. Unfortunately, both of my parents have faced difficulties in their health; my mother’s recent passing from cancer has been an ultimate motivation to keep pushing forward, the care she received is the person I strive to be, she had such a peaceful passing at Covenant which for me is a sign I’m headed in the right direction, at the right time, and the right place. Therefore, I want to take up nursing to be the person to make a difference, the person that others can depend on, to serve and love with all of my heart.
