

Why nursing?

Nursing has always been my dream since I was a young girl, I grew up taking care of my younger siblings and grandparents. I love helping other and knowing I can make a difference in someone's life. Not everyone has someone to help them while they are sick or need assistance, and I want to be that person for someone, to let them know they are not alone. I truly believe that I was meant for nursing because not only do I love helping others, but I also have a special needs daughter that has shown me a different love and knowing I can care for her like I do for others makes me feel like I belong here. I want to be able to educate people about disease processes that they might not know about. I will try my best to educate myself to become a great nurse.
