

Since I was little, I have always wanted to work in healthcare. Being able to help someone in need has always spoken to me. As of now I want to do Labor and Delivery which of course could change after nursing school. I want to do Labor and Delivery because I want to be able to help mothers bring their child into the world. I have worked at a daycare for a while now so I have always been around babies, and it is a field I would want to stay in. Being able to help give a mother the miracle of childbirth and being able to help them through their transition into motherhood is something I want to be apart of. Even if I choose to go into a different field, I choose nursing to be able to care and help people through the roughest time in their life and also help them try to get back to their normal and healthy self.
