

CPE REFLECTION Module 4

1. Today I did my CPE. It was really nerve recking. I started my scenario well, just thought too much into it. Another thing is I assessed as I do in clinicals, so that ruined my time. Of course I ended running out of time.
2. I was feeling a bit stressed at the start knowing I was being watched. At the end of it I treated the mannequin as it was a live patient.
3. It was a good feeling that I can go through the steps of learning how to double check on the meds and to verify the doses that I will be giving. And makes me check for safety of the patient.
4. What I learned is to go in and just still assess but at the same time be working on what I need to do. Like be in there for what is most important to the patient. As well as prioritizing what the need.
5. I think I was doing ok, just could have used my time a bit better. I tend to talk a bit too much to patients. In the end, if I would have had maybe 2 more minutes, I would have finished. Still a good learning experience.
6. Again, I just need to prioritize what needs to be done to take care of the patients' needs and then go back and talk after I have documented if I have time.
