My name is Megan Ayala, ever since I was a little girl I have dreamed about being a nurse. I grew up with a very large family I have three siblings and we are all close in age this meaninging we were always playing outside together; kids being kids my little brother always got hurt! I believe to this day he has broken 6 bones, so being at the emergency room was no surprise with him. Since I am the older sister I am the one to always take care of my siblings and comfort them, this was something that I learned I was really good at and found my compassion for caring for others this way. When I was in high school I did not know what I wanted to do in college or even career wise, I didn't take college seriously and fell behind. I eventually found myself not knowing what I want to do at all, that is when I talked to my dad about it and he gave me a craft that I had made in kindergarten. This craft was a drawing of me as a nurse! I knew what I wanted to do when I was a kid, now looking back I always knew that I wanted to be a nurse since I was little because I saw nurses caring for my grandpa that was dying from cancer. They offered care to my grandpa that no one else could, I want to do the same for others. I currently work as a nurses aid and I cannot wait to advance my career and find my passion.
