I am currently a surgical technologist, I've had the privilege of being involved in life changing experiences for patience during some of the most vulnerable moments of their lives. These experiences have helped me understand and appreciate the skills that nurses bring to patient care. After the patient rolls out of the operating room as a tech, I do not receive updates or have the knowledge on how successful the surgery went for the patient, and that curiosity motivates me to become a nurse to gain a deeper understanding and become involved in the direct care of patients. Just being able to help others has become rewarding to me in the operating room and now I will have the opportunity to help in different settings.
