

Becoming a nurse has been a dream of mine since 10th grade. My family always said I was the nurse of the family even from an early age and have remained that. I started off as a candy striper at Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro North Carolina and fell even more in love with the idea of caring for the sick. Prior to obtaining my LVN certification, I became a CNA and remained in that profession for 10 years. When I did return to school in my early thirties, my goal was to become an RN but family and the responsibilities that come with being a mother and wife led me to begin work immediately after graduating which is what I have done for the past 19 years. Nursing is in my heart and I wouldn't change the path that has brought me to this point in my life, RN school.
