

Why Nursing?

During my time in undergrad, I knew I wanted to pursue a career in healthcare, but I struggled to decide which path was right for me. I started my journey in physical therapy, then switched to athletic training and even worked as an intern with Texas Tech's football and track teams. However, it was not until I got a job as a medical scribe one summer that I realized nursing was going to be the career I wanted to pursue. Through this role, I was able to observe the daily routine and demands of the nurse on staff, and I loved that she got to know all her patients on a personal level. The kindness and compassion she showed was very admirable, and I knew that was what I wanted to do as well.
