Introduction

I am a Career Direct® Consultant with a deep passion for guiding teens and young adults, from discovering their interests to finding their purpose. Through personalised career assessments and coaching, I help families identify the God-given strengths and unique design within each child – empowering them to live by design, not by default.

With over two decades of experience as a teacher and tutor, and Honours degrees in Curriculum Design, Education Management & Leadership and Business Management, I bring a strong foundation of academic expertise and practical insight. My journey as a homeschooling mother of five has further shaped my calling of mentoring young people.

In addition to career guidance, I specialise in mentoring families through the diverse landscape of homeschool school-leaving pathways, including the National Senior Certificate (NSC), IEB, Cambridge International, GED®, and the American High School Diploma. My goal is to help parents and their teens make informed decisions that reflect each student's unique strengths, values, and long-term aspirations.

My approach to career guidance is rooted in faith, a commitment to the transformation of young lives, and a hope for the next generation. My desire is to see every young person walk the unique path God intends for them – with clarity, confidence and purpose.
