

Alicia McGraw

-After obtaining my RN I am planning on working towards my BSN. After this program I will have 7 years of college under my belt and I feel like 2 associates is not enough to show. Obtaining my BSN will validate all of my hard work that I put into schooling. I do not necessarily plan on going into any form of management in the nursing world, so I do not technically need the BSN. I will be doing this for myself.

It is important to me that my children see that whatever you pick to do right out of college is not a life long sentence. You do not have to maintain that career forever if you decide to take a different path later in life. As much as I love being an x-ray tech, I knew that I wanted to do more with my patients and so I did. I will be graduating as a RN at 36 while maintaining a different career and raising two boys with my husband. I want them to see that you can do absolutely anything that you want as long as you are willing to put the time and energy into it. Pick what you love to do, and anything is possible- at any age!