Symptom management- The patients reported gratitude because many of their physical problems disappeared after receiving treatments and good nursing care.

Activities of daily living- The nurses confirmed that QNC involves providing an opportunity for patients to complete their daily physical activities independently as if they were healthy.

Encouragement- nurses perceived that giving encouragement included inspiring patients to get well or administering their self-care confidence and enhancing their self-confidence to assist optimizing their health and managing their illness as an aspect of QNC.

Emotional support- participants confirmed that relieving a patient's negative moods could be assisted by a nurse showing empathy, giving indulgent care such as gently touching the patient, and giving particular time to patients to express their emotions while providing nursing care

Nurturing Relationship- participants confirmed that the nurse helps the patient's ability to connect with family, friends and healthcare providers which is vital for delivering and receiving QNC

Respect for religious beliefs- participants perceived that nurses provide the patients and their families with opportunities to perform religious activities in the unit, and that respecting the patient's traditional and cultural beliefs is vital for providing QNC

Concern for cultural differences- Participants believed that when nurses develop a nursing care plan, they should consider the patients' different health-related attributes, cultural needs, and the need to discuss any restrictions with them related to their culture, religious and traditional beliefs, or dietary, hygiene or gender preferences.

3. How can you use the information obtained from this article as you become a registered nurse? How will this affect the quality of care you provide? (explain)

I can use the information obtained from this article by having a deeper and more holistic understanding of care in a nursing, that I will be giving to patients. After reading this article I realized how great of an impact nurses can have on patients just by being friendly and allowing the patient to use their full potential to promote healing and growth beyond the hospital setting.
