

The highest level of education that I would like to complete is my Masters. I would eventually like to become a Nurse Practitioner. Furthering my education is something that I have always been open and passionate about. Before even going to nursing school, I wanted to become a Nurse Practitioner, but I wasn't sure if I was still going to feel that way after completing nursing school, but that feeling hasn't changed. I would love to become higher up in the nursing field and make an impact for patients and the medical field.

Furthering my education and becoming a Nurse Practitioner is not only about acquiring advanced qualifications, it's about taking on a role that allows me to have a direct and positive impact on patients' lives. As a Nurse Practitioner, I aspire to provide comprehensive and compassionate care, building a meaningful connection with the patients. Taking this path is not just a career choice it is a commitment to a profession that resonates my values and passions.
