The highest level of education I am planning on completing currently is to obtain my bachelorette degree in nursing. Partly because as stated in the PowerPoint that it is being pushed among institutions to have nurses with BSN instead of the associate degree. I do know that I may want to go further after obtaining my BSN but that is a great place to start. If I do decide to work at a different hospital other than Firelands health, most larger hospitals also require you to have the BSN within five years of starting at their facility. I haven't decided if I will continue and obtain my master's yet, however there are some educational topics that I would like to explore further and determine if there is public need for it. Possibly providing various education classes or helping to gather the resources to provide further education for health care professionals and gain more in-depth knowledge.

While I am practicing as an RN with either my BSN or ASN I want to continue my schooling and really understand different diagnoses and why certain tests/procedures are performed. I know Firelands also holds different continuing education classes such as an ECG class to help you understand and interpret ECGs. This is something that I would be interested in and would like to further my education even while practicing to better understand and improve my patient outcomes.
