

I spend a lot of my time lately thinking about my education and how far I want to go and what my goals for myself may be. As I get closer to graduating from nursing school, I can't help but to think about my future. I have reached out to BGSU about continuing my education to achieve my Bachelors in Nursing. I have a job set to work at Toledo Promedica working the Progressive care unit. I love my unit and plan on continuing my education so I can continue working there and add to my knowledge within nursing. I also personally feel if I'm graduating with my RN I will continue my education to get my bachelors.

With that being said, I do not know what my plans are outside of getting my bachelors. A lot of my friends say when I am finished with my Bachelors in nursing that I should keep going and get my masters. However I really have no idea what I can do with getting my masters and need more guidance on the opportunity and options there are with getting my Masters. I am not sure what directions I could choose going with my masters and only know that I can become a Nurse practitioner or education. But I lack the knowledge with what kind of nurse practitioner I can be with that, or what I can do job wise with a master in nursing education. But I am not against the possibility of going to get my masters, I just need more education on the opportunities that it can bring me.
