 - A rule that I picked is that a nurse in a timely manner, clarify an order for a patient when the RN believes that it may be incorrect. This is inane important because this can prevent any risk for your patients, just because they are a doctors doesn't mean that they can make mistakes or accidentally type something wrong. It is important that you advocate for your patient when you believe something is wrong, even if you're unsure it's better to say something and nothing happens to the patient. This can even even occur when youre pulling out medications, sometimes medication can e placed into the wrong container, that is why we do the 6rights of medication administration.
