

This week I have reflected on my teaching style. I would say there are times I've been all three, Laissez-Faire, supportive, and directive-not at the same time. I realized it depended on the age of students for me. Students that were older, and not in preschool, I had a more directive style. When I first started teaching 3 year olds, I was very Laissez-Faire. There are pros to this style and still times when it is necessary but I just enjoyed my own day when I was more supportive in the activities. In order to be more supportive in my teaching, I will make sure to choose a wide range of activities. I am hoping to work off of my students' excitement in the activity.
