

I definitely think I fall between the Supportive and Directive Climate! I would say I am closer to the supportive, but I do have a bit of directive in my teaching. I am a very organized person and work best in a somewhat controlled environment. It has always been a goal of mine to lead by the example and interest of the children. I think I will be able to better attain this by focusing on becoming a more supportive teacher. I feel like the term "supportive" gives me a different perspective and I can manage this goal! I am excited to try to relinquish the control and let the children explore and lead me in their learning.
