Manifesting The Plan

Hi, I am Dakijah freeman, and my hometown is Opelika, Alabama. My major is childhood development, and I have no minor. I have a love for children, and mild trauma from my childhood drew me to help children. The road to student success means furthering my education to give my daughter a better life. My success will contribute to society by me assisting each child in growing in their trauma and not letting it destroy them in the future. I am trying to break my generation's curse and helping them break theirs too.

Perseverance, in my own words, means staying patient through difficulties. This has been my first hard time experiencing endurance, and I am going through a test to remain patient and keep fighting this storm. Learning how to accomplish and being a single mother has been my difficulty through trying to be perseverant. Praying and being reminded not to give up because my daughter is counting on me influence me to stay strong. Perseverance has allowed me to not give up even through this storm, and I am achieving every obstacle, not by throwing in the towel but fight. Graduating college is my top goal to grow ahead in life to be better for my daughter and myself. Staying persistent despite the work and graduating college is something I pray and wait patiently for God to bless me to accomplish.

I might face challenges while trying to obtain my degree, are procrastination and time. As a single mother, it's sometimes challenging to get time to work on homework and be exhausted from handling everything else on my own. Setting time management when I can get work done while my child is occupied or things are already done will help me stay energized and get my job done. After pregnancy, I tried school again, but I went through postpartum depression and worked to keep up. I fell hard on grades because I couldn't figure out how to balance everything. I tried to drop out of classes, but it was too late; to drop out, but in the end, I succeeded. To ensure the success of what Huntsville Bible College offers, I will take full advantage of every resource I can by ensuring I keep up on grades. I am determined to graduate college and make my daughter and myself proud. I am determined not to let anything get in the way of what I prayed for and working to accomplish. My success story will be when I graduate from Huntsville Bible College to further my education to become a guidance counselor who helps children become what they need to be. To also help my community and show each child they do not have to be what other people have written them to become.
