

Dakijah Freeman

Ms. Toney

EG 102

October 30, 2022

A Child's Love

A mother will say that there is never a manual to teach you how to raise a child. Sadly, most parents had to teach themselves or go by how they were raised. Being a parent is never easy, but it helps you grow in many ways you never thought. To gain a child in your most challenging time is the hardest thing a parent must endure when everything seems like it's falling apart. Sometimes it can be a minor thing a child can do to help you grow into yourself and help you forget all the tribulations you underwent. A mother's strength and a child's love can help push you to your best self in life. It is one experience that enables you to grow and teaches you to keep fighting every day, even when obstacles keep getting in your way.

Now it is valuable to know that being a mother is an experience that helped me grow and pushed me to be my best self in life. As I mentioned in my introduction, there are ways a child can help you grow into yourself. First, especially during difficult times, my child's smile brings the brightest light over my darkest days. Second, her cuddles and warm hugs relax me when those days have been overwhelming. Lastly, spending time with her gives us a time when we can grow with each other. Also, being a mother taught me that it's not about me anymore but about another human who needs me every day. Although times have been rough for me as a single parent, she still pushes me to grow as a woman and a mother.

In summary, a child is not your end but the beginning of your growth in you. For this reason, let's summarize how having a child who pushes me daily helps me keep going and not give up. As I discussed in my main points, my child shows many comforts, love, and affection, while hardships try to stop me from propelling me to my best self in high spirits. Therefore, being a mother to her gives me that push I need to provide and do more exceeding in life for both of us. This is the best experience for a mother who loves her child because she always gives me that strives to fight through anything. Because of her love, I get a chance every day to flourish to be a better me for her. Finally, God knew I needed her to help me change and grow in my life to push and conquer the many promises he has made for us.