The nursing article relates to any work environment by providing individuals with resources discussing safe environments for clients to feel comfortable with their identities (InSung et al., 2019). As a nurse, it is essential to assess your own beliefs before taking care of clients. Many clients may have different beliefs, and it is crucial to be open-minded to build a trusting relationship. This nursing student enjoyed the guest speaker this week. The speaker gave great insight into preparing the future for us future nurses. Bringing in a guest speaker to prepare us for interviews was beneficial as it helped shape the interview process. This nursing student enjoyed reading through this week's article. It is helpful to gain a good understanding of gender-related terminology. It is essential to understand communication with clients and not to make any assumptions. Employers should include training for staff to learn and develop techniques to ensure an understanding of all.
