 - Teamwork is crucial when working in the medical field. When leading a new team regarding PPE it is essential that the task is identified, as in what type of PPE is required, who is assigned to wear this PPE, and a clear explanation of what and when it is needed. The stages of group development include, forming, storming, norming, performing, termination, and closure. These stages can aid in the development of teams.
 - During the meeting with a new team I would start by making an agenda and identifying the tasks that need to be completed. I would ensure that the needed roles were filled before the meeting began. I would set the tone and ensure that the team had clear expectation of what would be addressed and then document team responses. During the meeting it would also be my responsibility to manage the time and people responses.
