Habitat for Humanity relates to Population and Global Health by providing affordable housing to low-income communities. Helping Communities offer affordable homes and household items for families, improve their living conditions, and allow community members to volunteer together to create relationships within the community.

While volunteering at Habitat for Humanity, I cleaned, moved, and organized different items the store received. It also provided me opportunities to socialize with local community members. Volunteering engages student nurses in gathering information about the local community. I contributed to the community by moving heavy furniture, testing electrical appliances, cleaning, and organizing items. I helped the community find new life to affordable household items, and it allowed me to spread awareness of community resources to other people.
