Reflect on how the following concepts:

Health and Culture:

The nurse must recognize that members of various cultures define “health” differently. Individuals may define themselves or others in their group as healthy even though the nurse identifies symptoms of disease. Cultural priorities of the client may differ from that of the nurse.

Culture and Healing:

Some individuals and families in some cultural groups may also use traditional healing systems, sometimes called lay or folk-healing systems, with or without allopathic (modern) medicine. In addition to seeking help from the nurse as a health care provider, clients may also seek help from traditional or religious healers. Most nurses have experienced clients who combine medical care with prayer. Nurses need to be sensitive to, respectful of and nonjudgmental regarding patients' health beliefs and practices in order to maximize patient outcomes.

Health status of all clients is influenced by the interaction of physiological, cultural, psychological, economic and societal factors. Diversity within and among groups necessitates data collection activities and programs that are tailored to meet the unique health care needs of different subgroups.

Health beliefs are translated into health care practices, which then affect health status. What constitutes appropriate care for specific health conditions may be guided by cultural and social class expectations?

Health Information and Education:

Planning health education programs requires identifying and building on cultural strengths and ensuring sensitivity to cultural factors. Meeting the language and cultural needs of each identified minority group, using minority specific community resources to tailor educational approaches, and developing materials and methods of presentation that are at the educational level of the target population are essential considerations in the planning process. Health programs should be sustainable over a long period of time and accountable to the people they serve.

You will be given a specific scenario upon arriving to the simulation lab. You will then have to act out how you will handle the situation as a nurse. The cultural scenario will be videotaped and watched back by the student and instructor during a debriefing period. Videotaping will be used for evaluating, remediating, and debriefing the educational process. The video will be used for educational and demonstration purposes only.

Once the debriefing period is over you will then complete a reflective activity and turn in to the instructor.

Reflective Activity

What are the major take-home lessons for you today?

- The major take-home lessons for me today were becoming cultural aware of the different cultures around me and how to properly care for these individuals and their needs. Also, I want to ensure every patient that they will receive the best quality care because my patients fear being in hospitals, so you want to make them feel comfortable. Lastly, make sure to reassure the patient that if they have any questions about the care, they are receiving or concerns to not be afraid to ask and you will go over and review what is going on.

How can I adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to the unique needs of diverse patient populations?

- I can adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to the unique needs of diverse patient populations by conducting research and evidence-based practice to become with different cultures and how each of them prefers treatment. The cultures that I would become most familiar with would be the most predominant ones in the area where I was working. Many cultures are very particular about what is acceptable in their culture and which gender will care for them, this is the most important aspect to study.

How can I adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to patients with limited English proficiency?

- I can adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to patients with limited English proficiency by offering them a translator or assigning a nurse to them who speaks the same language. When caring for a patient with a translator, I will speak to the patient directly and not the translator. As a nurse, you want to make sure you speak in a language that they understand and make sure not to use medical jargon because the patients will not understand this terminology.

4) What are some things you have learned today that you will use in your practice?

- Some things I learned today that will help me with my practice is caring for someone who has cultural and religious preferences. I learned how to communicate with someone using a translator and assigning the patient with a female nurse because that is something that made her feel more comfortable and was part of her culture. I also got to learn more about the Amish culture and how their culture works when in a healthcare setting. The patient was concerned about how she was going to pay her bills, but in the Amish culture the bill is sent to the parish and the whole community chips in to help with costs.
