Instructions:

Before Scenario:

- Read pages 95-106 of Chapter 7 “Overview of Transcultural Nursing”
- Read the following pages of <https://www.aacnnursing.org/Portals/42/AcademicNursing/pdf/Essentials-2021.pdf>
 - Domain 2: Person-Centered Care – Pages 29-32
 - Domain 3: Population Health – Pages 33-36
 - Domain 5: Quality and Safety – Pages 39-41
 - Domain 9: Professionalism – Pages 49-52
 - Domain 10: Personal, Professional, and Leadership Development – Pages 53-54
- Read Review the following QSEN competencies at <https://qsen.org/competencies/pre-licensure-ksas/>
 - Patient-Centered Care
- Reflect on the following concepts:

Health and Culture:

The nurse must recognize that members of various cultures define “health” differently. Individuals may define themselves or others in their group as healthy even though the nurse identifies symptoms of disease. Cultural priorities of the client may differ from that of the nurse.

Culture and Healing:

Some individuals and families in some cultural groups may also use traditional healing systems, sometimes called lay or folk-healing systems, with or without allopathic (modern) medicine. In addition to seeking help from the nurse as a health care provider, clients may also seek help from traditional or religious healers. Most nurses have experienced clients who combine medical care with prayer. Nurses need to be sensitive to, respectful of and nonjudgmental regarding clients’ health beliefs and practices in order to maximize client outcomes.

Health status of all clients is influenced by the interaction of physiological, cultural, psychological, economic and societal factors. Diversity within and among groups necessitates data collection activities and programs that are tailored to meet the unique health care needs of different subgroups.

Health beliefs are translated into health care practices, which then affect health status. What constitutes appropriate care for specific health conditions may be guided by cultural and social class expectations?

Health Information and Education:

Planning health education programs requires identifying and building on cultural strengths and ensuring sensitivity to cultural factors. Meeting the language and cultural needs of each identified minority group, using minority specific community resources to tailor educational approaches, and developing materials and methods of presentation that are at the educational level of the target population are essential considerations in the planning process. Health programs should be sustainable over a long period of time and accountable to the people they serve.

In the Skills Lab:

- You will be given a specific scenario upon arriving to the simulation lab. You will then have to act out how you will handle the situation as a nurse. The cultural scenario will be videotaped and watched back by the student and instructor during a debriefing period. Videotaping will be used for evaluating, remediating, and debriefing the educational process. The video will be used for educational and demonstration purposes only.
- Once the debriefing period is over you will then complete a reflective activity and turn in to the instructor.

Reflective Activity

What are the major take-home lessons for you today?

In today's lesson I learned the importance of making sure you are aware of your patients' cultural preferences. In this scenario, my patient was from the Amish community and in this culture, they stress an importance as a female patient to be taken care of by a female nurse. It is important to make sure you are accommodating to each patient to make sure they are comfortable and receiving the best care. I learned the importance of becoming more knowledgeable of the different cultural preferences so as a nurse I can make them feel more comfortable and establish a better connection with a patient.

How can I adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to the unique needs of diverse client populations?

As a nurse I can become more aware of what the different cultural preferences entail and what I can do as a nurse to better plan their care. It is important as a nurse to build trust with the patient, so making sure I am respecting their values and wishes. It is important that I am able to educate my patient on reasons behind medical treatment and the importance of what is prescribed. For example, if a patient is a Jehovah's Witness and needs a blood transfusion, it is not in their cultural range to receive that transfusion. So, it is important as a nurse to explain the reason behind the need but still respect the wish of the patient and try to find alternative options.

How can I adapt my nursing practices to be more responsive to clients with limited English proficiency?

When a patient has a limited English profile, it is vital to get an interpreter right away. Communication is important to make sure the patient is receiving the care they want. The interpreter being present will make sure the nurse is notified if the patient has any contradictions, allergies or cultural preferences. The display of an interpreter will help the patient feel more at ease and that they have a say in their treatment.
