| Rationale                          | Speaking with a volume, rate, or tone of voice that conveys negative emotions, such as frustration or anger, is a nontherapeutic communication technique because it can precipitate fear or anger in the client.                                                             |                 |

| Rationale                          | Displaying a caring attitude supports the establishment of a therapeutic relationship by conveying genuine concern and a feeling of emotional closeness, which results in the nurse's ability to achieve a greater level of communication and understanding with the client. |                 |
| Technique 3                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                 |

| Rationale                          | Asking a "why" question is a nontherapeutic communication technique because it can be perceived as accusatory, causing the client to become defensive and mistrust the person who asked the question.                                                                        |                 |

| Rationale               | Giving a defensive response is a nontherapeutic communication technique because it implies that the client does not have the right to express personal feelings.                                                                                                             |                   |
