

Geriatric Health Care Quality Improvement

Margaret Casey

Lakeview College of Nursing

N434: Evidence-Based Practice

Professor Eleni Key

06/10/2023

Geriatric Health Care Quality Improvement

Quality improvement within the healthcare system is necessary due to the serious nature of the profession. People will suffer physically, mentally, and emotionally if something is wrong. Disparities are observed in all aspects of healthcare. In a study published by the Library of National Medicine, ageism within healthcare was reviewed (S. Marques et al., 2020)

Article Summary

This article about ageism within the healthcare setting effectively make change systemically and individually. This article reports on quantitative and mixed-method studies done to explore ageism in several aspects. The article utilizes following electronic databases: PubMed, PsycINFO, Ageline, EBSCO, Embase, CINAHL, Global Index Medicus, DARE, Epistemonikos, Cochrane Database of Systematic Reviews, Campbell Collaboration, Prospero, Greylit and Opengrey (S. Marques et al., 2020). Quality improvement within gerontological nursing can ameliorate care standards that older adults experience.

Introduction

This article discusses authentic issues with ageism within the healthcare system by conducting a systematic review. This article can inform readers about what ageism looks like and how it is faced. Therefore, this article is an excellent example of quality improvement.

References

Marques, S., Mariano, J., Mendonca, J., De Tavernier, W., Hess, M., Naegele, L., Peixeiro, F., &

Martins, D. (2020, April 8). Determinants of ageism against older adults: A systematic review.

PubMed Central (PMC). <https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC7178234/>

Albright, C., & Whelan, P. (2019). Learning reflection: A nursing student recounts her experience with a medical emergency team. Alberta RN, 67(6), 27. www.nurses.ab.ca.

*As you can see the reference is centered and is bolded. The first line is NOT tabbed over, all other lines are, this is called hanging indentation. All references are double spaced. All sources should be listed in alphabetical order. Be sure to use the APA 7th edition and guide for your reference page.