

Summary

Clinicals at the maternal-fetal medicine was a learning experience. On Thursday morning, my preceptor had a lot of clients' schedules. All the client schedules were there for a routine stress test on their baby. I was to learn more about fetal heart monitoring as well as understand how to read contractions more on the strip. One patient had poor management of her gestational diabetes; because of this, I got to learn the possible effect it could have on her and the baby if not managed.
