

Pavilion Reflection

- 1. What was the most challenging interaction or situation you encountered today, and how did you handle it? If faced with a similar situation in the future, what might you do differently?

The most challenging interaction was when the 9-year-old was jumping on the nurse's station because I wasn't sure the correct way to react as a nursing student.

- 2. How did your communication style affect your interactions with clients today? Were there moments where you could have adjusted your approach to be more effective or therapeutic?

I tried to remain nonjudgemental and open to conversation, which helped conversations. There were probably some moments when I could have adjusted my approach because I was uncomfortable in the situation.

- 3. What emotions did you experience during your clinical experience, and how did those emotions impact your ability to interact with clients and staff? How can you better manage these emotions in future clinical experiences?

I was sad and uncomfortable, which affected my experience and interactions. I was unsure how to relate to the kids without saying the wrong things or saying too much. The whole vibe of the kid's unit was kind of sad, so I'm not sure if my presence fed into it.
