

Pavilion Reflection

1. What was the most challenging interaction or situation you encountered today, and how did you handle it? If faced with a similar situation in the future, what might you do differently?

The most challenging interaction I experienced today was getting to know all of the teenagers on the pediatric floor and being reminded of a time when my situation was not very different from theirs'. In the future I will try to be more removed from the situations I am experiencing so that I can be more present in the moment.

2. How did your communication style affect your interactions with clients today? Were there moments where you could have adjusted your approach to be more effective or therapeutic?

There were some patients I was unsure on how to interact with. I did my best to be respectful and that went a long way.

3. What emotions did you experience during your clinical experience, and how did those emotions impact your ability to interact with clients and staff? How can you better manage these emotions in future clinical experiences?

I experienced sadness and regret on my clinical visit. My ability to interact with the staff was hindered by this and I was not able to communicate with the patients as well as some of the other students. In the future I will try to overcome this and be a better participant.
