Practice: Helen	02/03/2026	07:46	Complete

Scenario

By using "I" statements and neutral observations, raise your concerns over an uncomfortable client interaction with your preceptor.

Overall Engagement

Overall Engagement

0 of 0 points

Selected option:

Exemplary

You've successfully completed this learning experience.

Rationale:

You did an excellent job handling this challenging situation. Instead of criticizing Helen's actions or making demands, you put things in terms of your needs and asked for specific feedback. Because you took this approach, Helen will likely be more direct in the future, which should improve learning and build teamwork.

Communication Technique Feedback: Points on technique separate from overall points

Asking for Specific Feedback

0 of 0 points

Rationale:

It's good that you asked Helen for more feedback, but your request was vague:

"Any kind of feedback would be great..."

This doesn't tell her what kind of feedback you want or how much. You're more likely to get the information you need to improve if you make a more specific request like this:

"Any specific tips on how to get better at IVs would really help me learn..."

Making Neutral Observations

0 of 0
points

Rationale:

You found a way to describe the situation in a neutral way, one that was easier for Helen to hear. You said:

"Your expression made me wonder if I did something wrong."

Showing Appreciation

0 of 0
points

Rationale:

There were multiple moments when you connected with Helen by showing her you appreciate what she's doing to help you learn. Small gestures like that can contribute to a more open and successful conversation. They can also help strengthen your partnership and get the most out of your clinical placement. Here's one example:

"Thanks for giving me time to start an IV. It was a good experience."

Using "I" Statements

0 of 0
points

Rationale:

There were multiple moments when you used "I" statements to share your feelings and thoughts. That way you avoided blaming Helen, making assumptions about her actions, or putting her on the defensive. Here's one example:

"This was my first real IV start. I want to make sure I got it right."
