

The activity is very helpful in making decisions on situations that we will be facing when we become nurses. Delegation is one topic that is very important and for new nurses, it seems to be difficult to prioritize which tasks needed to be delegated. I like the activity because it made me realize the importance of time management, delegation and how to handle team members/subordinates. All the situations the new nurse encountered are examples of what we will also encounter once we become nurses ourselves. Answering the questions also allowed me to reflect on which decision is important in a given situation. I am looking forward to more activities like this which will be beneficial in enhancing our leadership skills.
