

Lindsey Loewenstein
Journal #2

a.) A learning task that I responded to most easily this week were the quizzes that I needed to complete for each class. I think that the reason I found them “easy” this week was that I did not procrastinate and wait until the last minute to do them. I have found that writing down all of my assignments at the beginning of each week really helps me not get overwhelmed by focusing on one task at a time. As a learner, that is how I perform to the best of my abilities. The second that I slack off, I immediately feel overwhelmed and way in over my head. We are only in week three, but so far so good haha.

b.) The death of Kobe Bryant and his daughter is an immense tragedy that is being talked about all over the world. I would say that this tragedy has indubitably had an effect on almost every individual from every race, ethnicity, culture, age, social status, etc. This horrific event has brought light into every community and culture that intensifies the idea that death does not discriminate and the importance of how lucky we are to see another day. I think that it is beautiful to see the outpouring love and prayers that are being sent to all of the families that are dealing with such loss and heartache. There are no ill-minded things being said in the media as people are coming together to mourn the lives that were lost.

c.) This week ATI Nurse Manager modules were easier than last week’s modules, in my opinion. I felt like I did better on the modules because they were more straight and to the point. I think that completing the lessons in the modules is very time-consuming and can be frustrating at times. Some modules do not take more than half an hour or so to go through completely and having to keep your computer open to let the timer run is ineffective. I completely understand the purpose of going through each module to ensure that you are getting the most out of it, but I feel like that is what the quizzes are for. I feel like I do learn things from the Nurse Manager modules but feel like they are extremely time-consuming. You gotta do what you gotta do though!