Chapter 2

Chapter 2 explains to the audience how people can intellectually and correctly navigate through life's view on reality and finding the real meaning of truth. That truth itself is not discovered by man or can be created by a multitude of thoughts but preceded long before any phenomenal event in human history. I agree with the statement "the truth will not be changed by knowledge or by our ignorance" it just goes to show how much the truth really substantiate itself through proof even when its not seen with our very eyes. The discussion about curing an earache by having someone spit tobacco juice in the affected ear or by cutting a live chicken in two and placing it over the persons lungs are just some examples in history why people cannot create truth. Of course people today may laugh at this old tradition but like its said "it is important to realize that our laughter underlines the fact that people do not create truth" is already a fact that truth does not derive from human origin. The simple reason for why we can't only use verbal evidence to prove a case is simply because man is deceptive and now evidence is requested by the judge to prove someones innocence. Chapter 2 also discusses about establishing a foundation, dealing with dilemmas, the basics of moral judgement, but all in all I believe each of these topics are tools to help us sharpen our awareness of the deception that is constantly around us.
