After analyzing the information provided, one issue related to student diversity that Ms. Finnegan should address in her instructional planning related to this lesson is the use of the newspaper article about a professional basketball player. She has a diverse classroom with students who have different backgrounds.

One strategy that Ms. Finnegan could use to address the issue I identified is by using sources from which the students can choose from. The students will have different options. She can also broaden the topic of the article she would like them to read.

The strategy I described would be effective in facilitating student learning because it will build more interest in the students and they wouldn't be strangers to the topic that they would be reading.

After Analyzing the information provided, Valeria needs extra guidance while learning math concepts and how to apply them. In order for her to be proficient in the material she must receive extra time and help while learning the material.

One strategy for differentiating instruction related to this lesson to address the need that I identified would be for Mr. Lin to write the problem out, step-by-step and have her follow along. After they are done, he can go through the steps at a slow pace and explain what they did.

Having Mr. Lin scaffold Valeria through a problem by doing a step-by-step process and having her follow along by doing the same thing he is doing, will be effective in addressing the identified learning need because while he is explaining step-by-step she is following the steps. Going over the problem more than once at a slow pace can increase her understanding.

One aspect of the draft lesson plan that would be difficult for Theodore would be to engage in the individual activity because the students have to pick the pictures with different animals and Theodore likes cars.

One modification I would make to draft lesson plan to address this area of difficulty is to add pictures of cars into the lesson to keep Theodore engaged.

This modification would be effective for Theodore because it is a way to keep him engaged since he likes cars it would be more likely that he would be engaged in the lesson.
