Sara-France Vaval

Professor Autumn

Music Business

April 20, 2020

Be honest, would you hire yourself?

It is a great question, simple, yet difficult. I would definitely hire myself. In order for one to come to the point to consider themselves for a position, it would require a lot of internal work. Self-confidence, self-love and self-esteem etc. Back then, if I was asked that question, my answer would be a no because I didn't think so highly of myself. I always thought that I was a burden, and that I was not enough. When you perceive yourself as a failure, it is hard to see the good in thyself. Time has changed, and I have grown a lot into the person God is calling me to be. I am a very caring person and when I commit; I give my all and give the best of my abilities.