Well, unfortunately, I have not been to successful in getting my assignments completed on time. Fear of the unknown, and failure has been the biggest problem, but also time has been a factor. It seems every time I try to sit down and work on my class studies something comes up and pulls me away. It is almost like something is trying to stop me or distract me from completing the course. I Have not been this busy in a long time, things at home needing my immediate attention, or my sons and grandchildren, and so much forced overtime at work. In reality I just need to focus and dedicate some time each day to school, making it a priority just as I do with making my time for God and His word. I have found turning off the cell phone and saying no, it will have to wait, I have class studies to do seems to be a good start. I think I was allowing, and almost welcoming the distractions so I would not have face my fears, that I was unable to succeed in school.
