2-Review your score and discuss your areas of strength and areas for improvement.

3-Respond to the post for two of your classmates to discuss a point of commonality and to provide encouragement.

In order to be an effective social worker, the primary target is not to sit behind the desk and move papers around. The direct practice of a social worker is to take on the role of functions including but not limited to client situations assessment, resources assessment, services systems, informational giving. These are just a few categories that the role of a social worker takes.

When taking the Empathy Quotient the first score was a 39 which shows I am not in the Autism Spectrum however when taking the second time results have not changed showed a score of 38. The diagnosis was disheartened as a person with a disability showed lower score and placed you on a border line of diagnosis of mental disability. The struggle is real with disabilities and the studies are disheartened, I disagreed and will stride over the “expected finding”.

The target of a social worker is to manage the least basic function according to code ethics. The job functions will vary from day to day. The specialist practitioner might develop their own style, focus on the client and upholding the values of the agency.
