

CHAOCHAO WU
Marilyn McNeil
College Writing
30 November 2010

About discrimination

With the improvement of technology and social management systems, modern society is developing from a civilized perspective, but there will be some inequalities, such as discrimination. In fact, this matter is not just a problem that only occurs in the current society. People have been facing the problem of discrimination from a long time ago. Discrimination is divided into racial discrimination and gender discrimination. But I think everyone should be equal, and there should be no discrimination.

First, people's discrimination against women is not only reflected in the fact that girls should stay at home, and women cannot receive higher education. For example, in the movie Hidden Figures, one of the heroines has excellent academic performance and wants to study mathematics in a famous university, but that university has a clear rule that women cannot receive the education brought by the school. As a result, he has never been able to get the university admission letter. In the end, it successfully broke the school's old-fashioned rules through its persistence and excellent results. It can be seen from this that women have no right to decide on their educational experience. They want to receive education and are able to learn more knowledge, but the school does not allow it, because the men in the school believe that girls have no brains to solve questionable. They do not have the actual ability to deal with the problems in learning, they think that women are knowledgeable and stay at home.

Second, discrimination does not only occur between boys and girls, but also between girls. Although the sex is the same, the difference in skin color brings another kind of discrimination, racial discrimination. In the movie Hidden Figures, an excellent female mathematician works hard for the rocket launch in Nasa. When she wants to go to the toilet, she can only run one kilometer to go to the toilet in a small underground house. The house is a place dedicated to work for black women. Where she works, there is no place for black women to use the toilet. Not only that, they are not getting promotion opportunities, let alone attending important meetings. It can be seen from this that discrimination does not only exist between opposite sexes, and there is also greater discrimination between people of the same sex with different skin colors. They don't allow black girls to use the same bathroom as themselves, thinking that it's very dirty and will get bacteria.

Third, it is not only the existence of this kind of discrimination in the office, but also this kind of racial discrimination in people's lives. In the movie Hidden Figures, when another heroine takes her two children on the bus, they have their own exclusive seats, marked with black. This means that they can only sit in their own exclusive seats, and they cannot use seats with white people. When the white people see them getting in the car, they will make a sorrowful sound to show their disgust. In the library, black children are scolded by librarians because they are not in their own library area. In public, the black child did not know the mistakes he made, and he did not understand why he was scolded by the librarian. It can also be seen from this that both adults and children have been discriminated against from the very beginning of society, and they do not accept or welcome the arrival of black people. This is discrimination brought from the bottom of my heart.

Overall, whether it is racial discrimination or gender discrimination, it is fully reflected in the movie Hidden Figures. From the bottom of life to higher education and rocket launches related to national events, we can see the unpopularity of blacks and women. Although the ending of the movie is good, the three women have brought good results for themselves through their own efforts, but in the process of experience, they were scarred and even hurt the heart of the children. Although the result is getting better and better, the damage caused in the process cannot be escaped.