

In a couple of paragraphs discuss how an individual's views and beliefs about people who are economically poor can influence his or her psychosocial responses to people experiencing poverty. We are in a world where people are biased at times and do not care about other's. Poverty is a major problems in today's society. Poverty has a devastating effects or individuals, families and communities (Sheafor & Horejsi, 421). Poverty is a contributing factor to other problems such as breakup families, homeless, crime, substance abuse, suicide and disease. Children are especially vulnerable to the effects on poverty such as poor nutrition, diseases, family insecurity and social stability. Poverty is an issues of social and economic justice. Poverty can become result of economic recessions or depression. One of the most cause of poverty among individuals and families in the social work practice is job layoff, inability to secure a job that pays a living wages or illness.