

Armani Macon

Professor: Steve Nehlsen

PMN201: Nyack Heritage: OA

01/23/2021

Who Am I?

“I am who I am in the eyes of God – nothing more and nothing less,” Richard Rohr. Who am I? What makes me, me?

I am Armani Macon. I am from New York. I was born and raised in a small city North of the borough of the Bronx. I now live in a small town in the state of Connecticut. I am Black African American and part of the African American ethnic group.

What am I studying? I am pursuing a degree in psychology. I am reaching towards my master’s in clinical Mental Health Counseling.

What would I say Jesus is to me? In all honesty, Jesus Christ is my savior. Jesus is my deliverer. Jesus is my Lord and my king.

I have plenty of dreams for my life. An ultimate dream that I have for my life is to become an author. I have a dream to write books for young women who are lost mentally, spiritually, and emotionally.

One person I admire in my life is my mother. I admire her so much. I say this because I grew up in a poverty stricken home with just my mother and no help from my father. My mother worked hard to provide for me and my 3 siblings. She worked so hard to make it happen for each and every one of us. I have seen my mom at the weakest points of her life but still manage to be strong for everyone. I admire my mother so much.