“A Soleman Covenant:
The Dedication of Myself to God”

By Albert Benjamin Simpson

Saturday, January 19, 1981

Rewritten by Ashley Aikens

“To my God who is the everlasting creator of all things, I recognize that you understand my hearts intentions and what drives me to seek you. It Is you who see’s me in my purest form, even when my I fall short of your glory, but you know my heart’s desire is to dedicate myself to you, for all of eternity. I come to you confessing my sins, for my actions have been unpleasant. Upon reflection of my past experiences, I am filled with shame and misperceptions. My actions have resembled that of a monster because I have been ignorant and rude in my endeavors. You gave Adam the gift of purity and informed him of the consequences he would face, by disobeying your laws. I am a descendant of Adam and I have inherited his corrupt ways, which also means, I have inherited the same consequences he had to face. Therefore, I come to you in acknowledgement, that I should receive the same consequences of my descendant Adam.”

“You are everywhere, you see all that I do, based on my actions how could you not view me as a beast? Your loving kindness is everlasting. You sent your son in man’s image, possessing the same bodily forms, yet his soul was as pure as yours. He represents the unity between the Holy trinity, and the humbleness of our sinful nature. He also represents the New Covenant and through him we all have access to purified spirits. Through Jesus's coaching, I have learned to honor your name, therefore I can come to you gracefully. I am weak lord, but I ask you to strengthen my soul. I will honor your covenant eternally. As your word says, "He who believes shall have everlasting life and you shall raise him up on the last day". You granted us a new covenant and it has been sealed with the blood of Jesus."

"I declare to you my lord and vow before the heavens and the earth that I accept the conditions of the covenant and any terms that you have instilled in it. I confirm that Jesus is my savior and I accept the salvation that has been created through him. Your Love has made me put aside my rebellious heart and instead I seek your glory. What ever rebellious thoughts that may arise, please give me strength to overcome them. I yield myself to you for eternity. Take me and use me as your glory."

Seal my covenant with you lord. That way when I return to your kingdom of heaven, we will both have possession of it forever. Write it in Heaven, that I serve you eternally. When temptation arises remember me lord and give me the strength to keep my covenant promises. I am weak and without your guidance I may fail. But you give me the strength I need to conquer anything."

"For all the right reasons, I have covenanted myself to you in hopes of receiving everlasting life, and I shall never break my word. Give me all your graces in abundance, especially the Holy Spirit which I wish to experience in multitude, because it is the best portion of the inheritance, I receive from you. Until I reach my place in heaven, may your spirit cover me excessively so that I can overcome transgressions and the laws of the material world, in hopes that I can fit in heaven. Shower me with the spiritual blessings influenced by Jesus Christ.

I am now a soldier of Christ Jesus and my statement is “God you are king, Jesus lives within you, please support me and strengthen me, as you are mine forever”.
