The video I am summarizing is “A new probation program in Hawaii beats the statistics” which takes place in Hawaii , It is about how people who are granted probation and parole usually always agree to following the rules which could be various such as no drinking or no drugs but they still violate them and they are free most doing what they want committing crimes and are not learning from their mistakes because there aren't imminent consequences of actions being taken that is why judge Steven Aumn noticed a lot of laps on the rests on those release who violated their parole so he thought of how he was raised swift and certain he believes will make the people listen so he created a program named H.O.P.E which is suppose to help enforce individuals on probation and help reform and also in his program are strict and go by random so you are to follow the rules and law .Rapid responses to have behavior shaping and other communities have tried their own form of H.O.P.E. Judge Steven would put them back in jail and help them, especially those abusing drugs as he used a color system and it really helped reform because many inmates learn to take accountability and graduate from the program Hope.
