

Diana Marte

CRJ 342: Punishment and Corrections

Professor Kimble

December 13th, 2021

Link It

As I was watching the video Prisoners Enrolled in One of the Toughest Rehab Programs, one of the first things that I was able to notice was that this was a rehabilitation program. This was due to the fact that they are training these inmates to know better, to make them focus on other aspects while in this strenuous program. As the video said, 8 out of 10 inmates do not end finishing the program because it is made to be difficult but it helps those with anger and puts the inmates focus in things other than crimes such as firearms, drugs, or bank robberies. This program is meant to better the inmate before sending them out to the world and commit further crime after as seen that most criminals end up committing crimes as soon as they leave prison. This as well teaches them that there is something outside of prison and tries to salvage their spirits that have been corrupted by crime. And like the boy had said in the video, there are few prisons that offer programs before sending them out to the real world, which is stated in the text as well, “since the rethinking of the rehabilitation goal in the 1970s, very few prisons continue to conform to this model” (Clear, Cole, and Reisig., 262).