Female jail population

women are the fastest growing segment and the numbers of women incarcerated is increasing 14 fold in a little over 4 decades with a number of 110,000 incarcerated. mostly poor, mothers, and or addicts as well as being predominately african american and hispanic women.

Prisoners Enrolled in Tough Rehab

They are treated very roughly. They don't get respect when they get there, They have to earn the respect they get. John Fernandez an inmate there, is appreciative of the opportunity they got to be there. He says it's a blessing. They have to go through a rough 18 months. 8 out of the 10 people who try to join do not make it all the way through. I think this is a good idea, as it gives prisoners a goal to try to achieve.

the elderly in prison

This video was very interesting for me because I never thought about how the elderly survive in prison.

In america the number of people in prison over the age 65 has doubled since 2011.

They say this is the hangover effect from the 1980-1990

The " gold coats " get to shadow people for months. Elderly people tend to develop mobility difficulties and with dementia and what they remember. Sometimes they forget the rules of the prison as well.

Prison Camp

Prison low and a prison camp are very different. A prison low is dangerous but everywhere is dangerous in this world, in a low they may be immigrants, or they were convicted of a crime that has such a high dollar amount they are forced to serve the time. Lows also have 1,000-2,000 people. They offer more programs because there's so many people to connect with and talk to and they offer more jobs.

A camp general has a population of between 100 and as many as 1000. A camp has less people. At a camp you have to have 10 years or less. There is more medical access in a low than in a camp because there's more people in a low.
