Hello! It is very nice to meet you! My name is Kenu Howard. I am from Long Island, New York. I've lived here since I was three years old. I was born in the Bronx. I am currently enrolled in the social work program here at Nyack. My dreams in life are to get married to the man I believe God has placed into my life now. I also aspire to be a mother. In terms of my career, I want to become a Licensed Clinical Social Worker. I aspire to help different demographics such as those with developmental disabilities, those who are addicted to drugs and alcohol, and children. I believe God placed this desire on my heart because His purpose is in this desire of mine. Speaking of God, Jesus is my anchor. He is my friend. Truly. I sit and talk with Him the way I would any other friend, except with Him, I can be my pure authentic self because HE knows me already. He is also my help. I am only here due to His grace, and the calling on my life. I know this and I am so grateful. One person I admire in my life is my friend Chantale. She came here from Haiti after a tragic earthquake took place. She lost everything except for her faith and her family. Her as well as her family's love for God inspires me every single day. I work with this woman, and I am so inspired by her. Despite all she's gone through, she never self-loathes, groans or complains. She does her best and it is reflected in her life. I look forward to this semester! And decree in the name of Jesus that it will be a good one!
