Subject: Introduction to the Class

Hello,

I am writing to introduce myself. My name is Nehemias Brown Meza, and I have been living in the United States since 2017. I am pursuing a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration with a concentration in Wealth Management at Alliance University.

Before this, I had obtained my biblical studies degree from a bible school in Pennsylvania and participated extensively in extracurricular activities such as camping, piano, ukulele, and survival skills back home. Furthermore, I worked with children, teens, and young people at an organization based out of Medellin, Colombia, where leadership roles were taken up by me frequently while also learning how to work collaboratively within teams effectively over time.

On the professional front, my experience included working as a touristic guide providing high-quality service for customers who paid for it accordingly, ensuring that all their needs were met satisfactorily during this period spent together. Additionally, I am a born-again Christian. I have been working as a missionary. At the same time, I am part of an online group of young people willing to go to different countries, serve the communities, and share about Jesus with people. Throughout my experience, I have developed strong communication skills, which allow me to talk out ideas and hear other perspectives with respect. Additionally, I feel comfortable following an outline and being spontaneous when necessary. Moreover, while under pressure is where I work best; however, too much stress can sometimes become overwhelming. Lastly, brainstorming new ideas and delegating tasks come naturally to me, making it easy for collaboration within groups or teams to be done quickly and efficiently without compromising quality results.

I understand the importance of leading effectively while communicating clearly with colleagues, clients, and others. Therefore, I want to develop these skills and everything I can learn to help me go further.

Sincerely,
Nehemias Brown Meza
